

The Chronicle

HEBREW UNION COLLEGE - JEWISH INSTITUTE OF RELIGION/2006 ISSUE 68

IN THIS ISSUE:

The Views from Jerusalem and Cairo

HUC-JIR Faculty Retreat

Profiles: Cantor Israel Goldstein and Cantor Bruce Ruben, Ph.D.

In Their Own Words: Dr. David Aaron,
Dr. Rachel Adler, Dr. Reuven Firestone,
Dr. Andrea Weiss

HUC-JIR's Esteemed Emeritus Faculty

The World of eLearning at HUC-JIR

HUC-JIR's College and Youth Programs

Adventure Rabbis in Training

HUC-JIR students join together for Shabbat services in Rocky Mountain National Park.

cycle events for all stages of Jewish life; these events are held in private homes, unusual facilities, and wilderness venues. The rabbis and rabbinical students who lead these programs are all trained by the Reform Movement; the liturgy used is reflective of mainstream Reform congregations. The organization's website www.adventurerabbi.com receives over 200,000 hits a month from visitors from over sixty countries.

In addition to serving as the spiritual leader and guiding force of 'Adventure Rabbi,' Korngold also facilitates an adult-learning program, serves on a monthly basis as rabbi for a congregation in western Colorado, and creates innovative programs for the 20's – 40's group for another congregation in Boulder. She is assisted by a small but highly resourceful staff, including wilderness guides well-versed in Jewish education.

Over the last five years, Korngold and her 'Adventure Rabbi' supporters have witnessed a growing demand by the community for its programs. In order to successfully expand the program, she and her staff have been seeking to involve more Reform Jewish professionals who identify with its philosophy. Her mentor, Rabbi Ehrlich, helped her reach out to the entire HUC-JIR student body to recruit rabbinical students to join her for the first annual HUC-JIR 'Adventure Rabbi' Training program.

Becoming an 'Adventure Rabbi'

What motivated this inaugural cadre of HUC-JIR rabbinical students to volunteer to be trained as 'Adventure Rabbis?' A common goal was their hope of incorporating Korngold's teaching philosophy into the pulpit work they do as student interns and in their future rabbinate.

"I know that an important part of my rabbinate will be finding ways for Jews to leave the comforts of the sanctuary, to seek God and the Jewish community in the wilderness," Nicole Greninger explained. "I believe they are searching for informal Jewish experiences and for Jewish activities that take place in nature. I am not sure exactly what kind of rabbinate I am looking for, but I know that the outdoors will be part of it in some way."

As part of their training, the students hiked, celebrated Tikkun Leil Shavuot (an all night study marathon in commemoration of receiving the Torah on Shavuot), prayed together on the mountainside, and enjoyed havdalah services amidst the outdoors. The weekend provided a stimulating forum for discussing the key issues confronting Jewish life today and brainstorming about new strategies to build Jewish life and community.

Evon Yakar, who has been affiliated with Reform Jewish camps for more than sixteen years, valued this opportunity "to meet other students from HUC-JIR and to learn from a rabbi/educator who has successfully applied the values of Jewish education in an outdoors setting."

Jessica Kessler Marshall came to this experience through her active involvement with Hazon – the Jewish environmental group that organizes bike rides and retreats in the U.S. and Israel – whose mission is rooted in the belief that environmental education is a vital and significantly underutilized resource in Jewish life. She found the 'Adventure

Jews, and those who love the outdoors are not being reached."

Going forward, Stacey Delcau "would recommend this program to other students because it is so important to be exposed to a variety of ways of fostering spiritual engagement." She sees this program, which links her concern for the environment and Jewish learning, as "a great opportunity outside of the classroom to discuss issues facing the future of Judaism."

Korngold plans to continue this training program and build upon the relationship with the College-Institute and its students. She has demonstrated that connecting to Judaism can take place in unexpected places. 'Adventure Rabbi' provides students with yet another

Rabbi Jamie Korngold (center) and HUC-JIR students in Rocky Mountain National Park.

Rabbi' training program to be an ideal opportunity to integrate her commitment to Jewish environmental education with her rabbinical education and professional development.

"My first spiritual experiences were in the out-of-doors, but I never found a Jewish group that was interested in doing things outdoors until after college," recalled Justus Baird. "I think the cultural bias of Jews as urban folk doesn't work for all professional development opportunity to advance their skills as innovators of meaningful programs that can attract and engage the largest percentage of Jews in America – those not connected to the synagogues and other institutions of Jewish communal life. ■

Students, alumni, and HUC-JIR community members interested in becoming involved in 'Adventure Rabbi' should contact 303.417.6200 or info@AdventureRabbi.com